THE TILTON-BEECHER CASE.

Evarts Yet.

New York, June 3.—The following report of the Tilton-Beecher case to-day is furnished by the Evening Post in advance of publication in that newspaper: There was a large attendance to-day in the Brooklyn court room, and many spectators stood upon the outskirts of the crowd. Evarts, Porter and Abbott were late, coming in together at 11 A. M. Evarts resumed his address to the jury, and read from the cross examination of Tilton as to his use of the paper in the interview with Beecher, December 30th. He said Tilton's own testimony showed the reading of the paper to be the climax of his accusation against Beecher. Counsel read from the testimony of Beecher upon the same points, and said the evidence of both parties to the interview was to the effect that the reading of this paper was the first thing which occasioned the manifestation of surprise by Beecher and produced upon him a decided arraignment; there was no escaping from the acceptance of defendant's version of this paper, for no other had been substituted, and the paper itself had been destroyed, for with it plaintiff could not have obtained his footing in court one moment. These facts destroyed the whole story of Tilton's alleged narrative to Beecher of his wife's verbal confession of adultery. Evarts considered the interview between the alleged adulteress and the alleged paramour held in her chamber alone at 9 o'clock at the suggestion of acquiescence of her husband. He urged the incredibility of such an occurrence. If there had been a particle of truth in the charge as presented, supposing it possible that an outraged husband could desire or suggest such a meeting, would the seducer wish such an interview? Evarts spoke of the character of Tilton, as manifested in his acts and declarations. What an abominable, abnormal and monstrous character this was which would resolve to pull down the temple of his household and crush wife and children rather than rest under imputations which were cast on him by the jests of Dr. Bacon. Rather than endure the sting of Dr. Bacon's witty references to Shakspeare, he determined as he declared, to smash Elizabeth and ruin the good name of his children. Returning to the night of Dec. 30, Evarts said the first thing Moulton said to Beecher when he came from the interview with Tilton, was to ask him if he was going to Mrs. Tilton. How came Moulton to think of such a thing? Then Moulton offered to accompany Beecher. Why should he think Beecher needed an escort to walk such a distance in an orderly and respectable city? Beecher reached Tilton's house and was shown up to the sick chamber of Mrs. Tilton. The nurse, Mrs. Mitchell, didn't need to be asked to leave the room when a clergyman came at an accustomed hour to talk with the sick woman who was his parishioner. She left the room as any nurse would have left it, or any member of the family would have left under such circumstances. She had no fear her patient would be unduly disturbed, for she was a religious woman herself and did not apprehend any danger from a man who preached that peace which passeth all understanding. Her confidence was justified, for when Beecher left and the nurse returned she found Mrs. Tilton calm and tranquil. Nothing had occurred in that interview to disturb her conscience. She had repented a wrong and redressed an evil communication which was false. She had obtained a sort of restoration of herself in the good opinion of a good man. Well might she sleep peacefully that night. Evarts read from Beecher's testimony as to the interview with Mrs. Tilton. It showed that Beecher had a better memory than Moulton, for he remembered that he knew the woman was sick. It is indicated also in the description of the careful arrangement of the drapery of the couch at that hour of the night that Mrs. Tilton had been prepared for this visit. He continued by reading the testimony of Beecher as to his conversation with Mrs. Tilton, and speaking of the retraction he said the jury had here a letter written by Mrs. Tilton immediately after the charge, which showed conclusively that the charge was one of improper solicitation. No stronger evidence could be produced, except magical restoration of the written accusation from the flames, in order to confute the present pretensions of the plaintiff, that it was a charge of anything else. The letter was put in evidence by the plaintiff, and he was bound by its natural interpretation. The accusation therefore stood upon his own evidence, not only false in itself, but extorted from a sick wife by importunity. Evarts quoted authorities upon the question of evidence of statements obtained from wives under coercion of their husbands, and said the old common law rule with regard to the responsibility of the husband for his wife was still unchanged in this country and England. Counsel said the letters from Mrs. Tilton to her husband showed she was a woman of genuine and humble piety, and believed in the divinity of that Savior whom her husband crucified. Instead of scoff and scorn, they showed love for her husband and submission to his will.

Recess.

New York, June 3.—After recess, Evarts said he had not asked you to detract from the testimony of Moulton and Tilton, except where they have been contradicted out of their own mouths, or by competent witness. Tilton says he returned to the house the night of the retraction and found his wife greatly agitated. The nurse testifies that Mrs. Tilton was perfectly calm when she (the nurse) went to bed, and that Mrs. Tilton fell asleep. Mrs. Mitchell testifies that for an hour after she left the room she heard the angry tones of the husband and the pleading voice of the wife, and after a while Tilton came into his study, got pen, ink and paper, and returned to his wife's bedside. Then he went out and she went in and found Mrs. Tilton agitated and seeming as if she had been weeping, so you see how false Tilton's testimony is in regard to the condition of his wife. He endeavors to throw the burden of her agitation upon her interview with Beecher. We want to know what the whole truth is in this matter, and I give it to you in the words of Mrs. Mitchell, which show that Mrs. Tilton, instead of having anything else on her conscience, any trouble to redress, was quietly sleeping. And there you have the first proof of the husband's coercive power over his wife. You find Tilton anxious to find out the result of the interview with Beecher. He wakens her and finds to his consternation she had given a retraction, and that he was in the same position, if not worse, than before. The influence on the sympathies of Beecher which he had sought to produce or any degree of fear on Beecher's part which he hoped to produce by the making of such a charge by a respectable woman, were entirely out of the question. He now thought all this arrangement to affect Beecher was spoiled, and the weapon he expected to use against Beecher turned against himself. Gentlemen, do you believe the story that the nurse tells, or don't you? She has not been contradicted by Moulton or Tilton. Counsel read the paper which Tilton showed to Storrs as the wife's explanation of the facts. In this she says finding the letter of retraction had placed her in hostile attitude to her husband, she wrote the third letter. Counsel presumed the jury understood that the first paper was extorted from the wife the night Tilton and Moulton were storming in her chamber, on the 29th, and they saw the same coercion producing the explanation of the retraction on the 30th. Evarts discussed the motives which led Tilton and Moulton to destroy the confession, a document which would have settled the nature of the charge beyond all controversy, had it been presented. All the frivolous falsehoods in Moulton's testimony are denounced as falsehoods by Beecher. The jury must judge whether they were not false in the consciousness of witness.

Court adjourned.

A Point Well Taken.

San Diego, June 3.—The Union's letter from Ures, Sonora, May 16th, says no news of Apache raids for the past two weeks. Great excitement prevails about the Texas raids; fears are expressed of war between the two countries. The newspaper Estrella is full of telegrams and extracts from United States papers. Referring to the Washington Chronicle's version of the Texas raids, that Mexico was too weak to prevent its bad people from invading Texas, the Estrella says if the great republic cannot, or will not, keep marauding Apaches from passing into a friendly State and committing all kinds of atrocities, it cannot wonder at weak Mexico not being able at all times to prevent her bad boys from invading a friendly State.

BACON AND BOWEN.

Henry C. Bowen is out in another card, addressed, this time, to the relations between himself and Dr. Bacon:

To the Editor of the Herald: Rev. Leonard Bacon, D. D., of New Haven, does right in not receiving as truth all that is said by "interviewers." I have not claimed any intimate personal friendship with that distinguished divine; for the fact is I have not met him, "according to my best recollection," more than three times during the past ten years. I like Dr. Bacon's platform of friendship and am glad to stand on it. He claims to be a "friend of mankind," and that statement, of course, must include me, as I am just one of the kind named by him.

This is a free country. Dr. Bacon don't like my views and policy in regard to the great scandal in Brooklyn, and he has a perfect right to his opinions. I may be permitted to state, with the same freedom, that I don't and never did like the earlier utterances of Dr. Bacon on slavery and African colonization, or his later utterances on politics and finance; and yet I believe him to be a most excellent and able Christian gentleman.

Dr. Bacon thinks that I "permit the public to believe" by my silence a great many awful things. My answer is that he and every other Christian gentleman is bound in honor not to hang or imprison or even in his heart condemn his fellow until he can do it in the face and eyes of all the facts.

In a long and useful life Dr. Bacon has found among "mankind" a great many people who have differed with him, and, if I am correctly informed, there have been two or three occasions even in New Haven where there were two very decided opinions on certain social and domestic matters to which his special attention was at the time invited. In this Brooklyn affair I claim that I have done right in keeping my mouth closed; and, what is better, that I have done right in keeping my promises. Others wiser and better than I am might have done differently.

As to the "business" part of his relations with me I don't think Dr. Bacon or any other writer of the Independent will complain. "Business is business," Dr. Bacon truthfully declares, and I wish that declaration was more universally recognized.

Dr. Bacon has the credit of bringing to a head this Brooklyn difficulty, and people are not united in their opinion as to the wisdom of his course. I have thus far kept silent in this case, and shall for the present not deviate from that course, even to oblige so wise a man as Dr. Bacon.

THE MEMORY OF NAPOLEON III. IN ITALY.

A letter from Milan of the 3d has the following: "I have just paid a visit to the studio of the sculptor Barazghi, the artist charged with the execution of the monument to be erected by this city to Napoleon III. After the death of the emperor, the chief inhabitants here, recognizing the services rendered by him to the Italian cause, and especially to their town, opened a public subscription for a statue to commemorate the deliverance of Lombardy by the French army. The Municipal Council supported the project and in a few days only a sum of 100,000 francs was collected, notwithstanding the opposition of certain journals, which pretended that it would be an offense to Republican France to glorify the memory of the late Emperor. The quarrel is still far from being appeased, and when recently M. Barazghi, to judge the effect of the work, which is to be placed in one of the public gardens, gave an exhibition of the model, considerable excitement was caused, and seditious placards were posted on the walls, through the incitement of the ultra party. The monument is of colossal dimensions, the pedestal being twenty-six feet high; and the equestrian statue, thirteen; the proportions are the double those of life-size. The Emperor wears the uniform of a General, as represented in Yvon's painting of the battle of Solferino. He holds in his left hand the reins of his horse and in the right his cap, with which he is saluting the population on triumphal entry of the French troops into Milan. The statue is of bronze, as well as the bas-reliefs, which occupy the two fronts of the pedestal. The work has a most imposing effect, the execution being remarkable from every point of view. The artist, who, though still young, enjoys a great reputation, has surpassed himself in this really magnificent composition. He declares that two years' labor is still necessary to terminate it."

REGISTERED PACKAGES IN THE MAIL.

The Washington correspondent of the N. Y. Herald says:

Postmaster General Jewell will in a few days inaugurate a system of through registered pouches between all the large and important distributing offices in the country. Heretofore all registered packages have been sent in mail pouches in common with all other kinds of mail matter, and have of necessity been handled by all postal clerks on the route between the points of mailing and destination. Under the new system all such packages sent from any of the large cities to another will be enclosed in a registered pouch, locked at the sending office and not unlocked until it reaches its destination. As special locks will be used with keys at each end of the route only and no intermediate person will hold keys to these pouches it is confidently expected that this system will afford the greatest possible security to all valuable packages sent through the mails as registered mail. Senders will register such packages in the same manner and at the same rate as at present and will receive all the advantages of the new system. The postal clerks on the postal cars will be relieved from a large amount of labor, handling only the pouches instead of every package as heretofore and will thus gain time and distribute all other mail matter with more celerity. The first pouch will be placed on the route from Boston to New Orleans, then from New York to San Francisco, including Cincinnati and St. Louis. Should the system work with satisfaction on these routes it will be extended to and from all the principal cities in the United States. This system has been discussed somewhat for a year or two, but nothing was perfected until Mr. Jewell took the matter in hand. He will announce the details in a few days.

A dispatch from St. Louis, May 21 says: The grasshoppers have already done much damage to the ten counties on the western border of this State. The eastern part of Kansas and Nebraska and a narrow strip of country in western Iowa are liable to some injury when the grasshoppers' eggs hatch out, and there will doubtless be much more alarm. The alarm is groundless. There is no danger of the young insects doing much damage east of the general line indicated, and no prospect whatever of a repetition of the invasion by full-grown insects next fall. The young insects just hatched will not begin to get wings, and consequently be able to move beyond their present limits, before the end of June. By that time the crops will be mainly beyond danger. The second generation of these insects soon perishes and cannot reproduce itself.

Providence, Rhode Island, is putting in her claim for a Centennial celebration. The First Baptist Church, whose graceful spire and comely proportions have long been justly celebrated, will be one hundred years old on the 29th of this month. Its corner-stone was laid June 1, 1774, and the house was opened for worship on May 28, 1775. The centennial of the latter event will be celebrated with appropriate exercises. A historical discourse will be delivered by the Hon. Samuel G. Arnold, the President of the Charitable Baptist Society, the corporation in which the property is vested.

The steamer Dayton, running in the Yamhill trade, has changed to her summer time. She only makes two trips a week now, leaving Oregon City each Monday and Thursday, returning the following day.

Under date of May 22d, D. C. They found abundance of snow on the trail, but the warm weather was causing it to disappear very fast.

Mr. D. F. Davis, an old gentleman living near Forest Grove, got his leg broken just above the knee one day last week. In the evening a very pleasant reunion was had at the house of President Marsh.

GENERAL SHERMAN'S MEMOIRS.

[S. F. Examiner.]

Whatever doubts may be entertained as to the soundness of General Sherman's opinions of his contemporaries or the propriety of expressing them at the present time, no one will be inclined to question the courage with which he publishes them or the faith that he has in their correctness. Himself a man of acute and intense feeling which he does not affect to conceal, a plain manner and a dauntless personal courage, with, besides, an apparent delight in public controversy, the general of the army is the very man, when he shoulders his pen and shows how fields were won or lost, to treat with a frankness approaching to brutality any one concerned with whom his relations are not particularly amicable. General Hooker, for instance, is set down as a "fighter" very much overrated, especially by himself; a general who lightly esteemed orders or military principles when he could "switch off after glory;" a dispatch-writer rather more eloquent than exact, and a man who indulged in one act to display two unsoldierly characteristics, personal pique and personal cowardice. General McClernand, again, is written down as an intriguer and an egotist who did not hesitate to claim in the most offensive manner credit for deeds he had never performed. Generals Frank Blair and Logan are admitted to have been brave, but General Sherman mistrusted them because they would inevitably subordinate the soldier to the politician. General Butterfield's departure to the rear at a critical period is ascribed to a fear of being involved in the disaster which he thought impending at Atlanta. Mr. Murat Halstead comes in for a hard knock as an editor who would sacrifice truth on the shrine of sensation. And so the general stalks along in his heavy jack-boots, here impinging on a sensitive skin and there grinding a tender toe to pulp.

The days of duelling are practically over in this country, and General Sherman's position would, even if the code were generally recognized, make it somewhat difficult for most of the parties interested to secure what satisfaction is afforded by an exchange of shots, so that the publication of these "Memoirs" will not be as fertile of cartels and combats as might have resulted a few years since under similar circumstances. Public opinion, too, is against the righting of wrongs or answering of accusations with the horse-whip or the bludgeon. Nevertheless—and this is a source of alarm to the reading public—the person assailed can always find a battle-ground in the newspapers. After me, General Sherman may say, the deluge of cards, contradictions, corrections, statements, interviews, affidavits, what not; all the more certain to be printed because they will appear at a dull season of the journalistic year. What the ultimate result will be it is not easy to predict. To each man a different opinion, particularly on matters personal. It may, however, be assumed that General Sherman, having had ample opportunities for observation and ample time for reflection, has not expressed himself more vehemently than he is warranted in doing by the facts as seen from his stand-point.

CHARLES DARWIN.

HIS WORK AND HIS MANNER OF LIVING.

Charles Darwin has been more violently denounced by churchmen than either of the others, because they know more of him, and because his teachings, drawn direct from nature, have been more immediately opposed to their dogmas, and, indeed, to all scriptural traditions. Not much is known of the man, nor, in fact, of any of his works by the public at large. His name is in everybody's mouth, with frequent references to him as the philosopher who has discovered that we are nearly related to monkeys. That is the sum of the popular knowledge, and it seeks no increase. The ordinary Englishman and American think Darwin an intellectual fanatic, who loves to unfold new and strange theories for the sake of the notoriety they give him.

HIS EARLY LIFE.

The eminent naturalist and geologist was born Feb. 12, 1809, at Shrewsbury, by whose clock Falstaff, according to the poetic chronicler, William Shakespeare, claimed to have fought for so long a time with the fiery Hotspur. His paternal grandfather was Dr. Erasmus Darwin, physiologist and poet, whose ingenious and whimsical poem, "The Botanic Garden," enjoyed a wide popularity, and was highly commended in its day. His maternal grandfather was Josiah Wedgwood, the renowned manufacturer of pottery, and his father was Dr. Robert Waring Darwin, who, like his father and his son, was a Fellow of the Royal Society. The boy Charles gained his early education in his native town. At sixteen he entered Edinburg university; remained there two years, and then went to Cambridge (Christ's college), where he was graduated when he was twenty-two. He had already evinced a decided fondness, a genuine enthusiasm, indeed, for science, and had attained a proficiency in it that is very unusual in one so young.

Fortunately for him, about the time he left college, Capt. Fitzroy offered to share his cabin with any naturalist who would accompany him in his ship Beagle on her proposed exploring voyage round the globe. Darwin accepted with alacrity; giving his time and mind to the expedition, without any other return than that he should be allowed to dispose of his own collections. He sailed from England Dec. 27, 1831, and returned Oct. 22, 1836; having been absent nearly five years.

As may be supposed, he made excellent use of his fine opportunities, publishing in due season the result of his investigations in a series of volumes, entitled "A Naturalist's Voyage Round the World." They attracted a great deal of attention, had a wide sale, and became in many respects an authority.

In his thirtieth year, Darwin married his cousin, Emma Wedgwood, who had considerable property, and not long after took up his abode in Down parish, Kent, where he has a pleasant country seat, and where he spends most of the time that he is not in London. His entire life has been devoted to science. His researches have been most thorough, his labors tremendous, his patience inexhaustible. His works have been translated into many modern languages, and have been generally accepted as decisive in scientific circles.

His excessive diligence and painstaking are all the more admirable when it is remembered that his health has been very delicate from childhood. It is not too much to say that he has been a life-long invalid. Many other men would have thought themselves unable and unfit to work under similar circumstances. But his physical disorders, while they have necessarily interfered with his labors, have not prevented him from accomplishing marvels of achievement.

The severity of his toil has, doubtless, hindered his healing, and he has often been urged by his friends to take more rest. He often promises to do so at some future time. But when the time comes he finds his studies so engrossing that he cannot tear himself from them. He does not violate any of the ordinary laws of nature. He takes excellent care of himself in many regards. In intense application, in severe intellectual effort, however, he fails to practice moderation. He says, with entire truth, unquestionably, that when he is following a certain train of truth it would be worse for his mind to attempt to give it up than to pursue it to its ultimates. Then worry would be added to the work, and worry is twenty-fold more wasting than the hardest possible work.

A man who has once fairly entered upon scientific studies, if he be capable of comprehending them fully, can scarcely refrain from over-exertion of brain. They take complete possession of him. They are at once a torment and a delight. They can not be denied nor banished. And they steadily grow upon him. They open new worlds to him; they give him new thoughts, new life. He has the sovereign satisfaction of knowing that he is on the track of truth; that he is dealing with nature; that he is in the inner sanctuary of knowledge.

The enthusiasm of a man of science can hardly be over-estimated. The love of knowledge exceeds, in his case, the love of woman; for it is never satisfied—it grows by what it feeds upon. He will expose himself to all discomforts, all dangers; he will invade the arctic regions, or brave the ardor of the tropics; he will tear or cut his flesh; he will swallow poisons; he will clutch at results in the teeth of death.

Darwin's "Origin of Species" is his best known, and surely one of his greatest works. In it he sustains and demonstrates the development theory, which many persons seem to think originated with him, but which is very old. He systematized and formulated it, and popularized the phrases (representing general principles) natural selection, survival of the fittest, struggle for existence, etc. The work has had a tremendous influence on modern thought and belief, and has played sad havoc with ancient superstitions, and relics of authority. "The Descent of Man" is another of his powerful contributions to science, which has been read and discussed throughout civilization. The amount of mere readings shown in these volumes is something marvelous. They have been, moreover, so completely digested, arranged, and enforced by original thought that they will be such a monument to his memory as any man might covet. The illustrious naturalist could not have served science as he has, had he not been independent in circumstances.

Apart from his wife's estate, his father left him a handsome property, which has enabled him to dispose of his time as he has seen fit. His income is about £4,000 per annum. He dispenses an elegant hospitality in town and country, and though his delicate health and constant studies do not leave him much time for society, he is quite fond of it, and it is particularly fond of him. Necessarily something of a specialist in science, he is not at all a specialist in knowledge.

His knowledge is prodigious; extending to every topic that can be broached. He reads with perfect ease French, German, and Italian, and is fairly conversant with Spanish, though he has lost a good deal of it from the fact that scarcely any science is to be found in that language; and science is, of course, the bulk of his reading.

No man could be more unpretending. He is singularly amiable and genial, which is not what might be expected from one who has suffered so much from ill-health. He is a very agreeable talker; never obtruding his opinions upon anybody, and being wholly free from egotism.

Some weeks ago, an American who had been introduced to him as Mr. Darwin, talked with him, for an hour or more, on Hindoostan, the people, their religion, customs, and idiosyncrasies, and went away with the impression that the Englishman had lived many years in the country he knew so much about. "By the bye," he inquired, the next morning, of a friend, "is that Mr. Darwin we met last evening in any way related to the "Origin of Species?"

"Distantly," was the reply.

"How distantly?"

"The distance from his brain to his feet."

"What do you mean?"

"I mean that the Mr. Darwin we met last evening is the 'Origin of Species' himself."

"The devil he is! Why he didn't mention science once!"

A citizen of Edinburg sat next to Darwin at a dinner in Liverpool, last summer, and as they had been presented, they fell into conversation. The subject of science happened to come up. The Scot asked a number of questions of his companion, who replied to them very moderately with an "It seems to me," invariably prefacing his opinions.

"Your views are very plausible," remarked the Edinburgher after awhile. "There's something in them no doubt. If you were only the great Darwin, the matter would be decided. But ordinary men, men like you and myself, Mr. Darwin, can't take the time, even if we had the brains, to fill our hearts with science. O no; that's not to be looked for."

Darwin made no other comment than a smile, and it was not for a month after that the Scot discovered the great Darwin and his dinner comrade at Liverpool to be one and the same person.

Charles Darwin appears to exemplify the truth of his "Origin of Species" in his own person. Although having a strong and intellectual face, he certainly bears a striking resemblance to an ourang-outang in respect to his features. The nose, the mouth, the whole facial configuration convey an impression of the quadrumana species. One does not observe the likeness after talking with the scientist a little while, but at first it is painfully visible.

He is aware of this himself, and he makes a number of jests on the subject. It was he, I believe, who first called himself the "Missing Link."

He says that many persons think he has drawn his general conclusions from personal premises; that he is, in short, an autobiographic scientist. He avers that, if he were to meet a gorilla in its native haunts, the animal would be sure to walk up and offer to shake hands with him as a man and a brother. A gorilla is a very intelligent beast, he adds, and can easily detect family resemblances. So, you see, he is not devoid of a sense of humor, which is apt to be an indication of breadth, particularly when one can appreciate a joke on one's self.

The savant's hours of study and work are nominally six out of the twenty-four. Those intimate with him say he cannot be depended on, however, that his six hours are often doubled; that, though he has long forsworn lucubrations, he is likely to indulge in them when he has a favorite volume, or is in pursuit of data for generalization. He has been known to pore over books and MSS. the greater part of the night; though not recently; for he has learned, with increasing years, that he must respect his body, if he would preserve the vigor of his mind. He takes much out door exercise in carriage and on foot; is careful of his diet, and drinks nothing but light wine—generally Bordeaux. He is very unlike most of his countrymen in this regard. Over-eating and over-drinking are the cause of half their ailments, but of none of his. The bath is a passion with him. He bathes twice a day from head to foot, believing that copious use of water helps the brain by stimulating the circulation, and, to a certain extent, takes the place of exercise.

Darwin writes with exceeding care; perfect simplicity and clearness being what he is most solicitous to attain. He never permits a single sentence to stand unless it suits him, and whenever a new edition of any work is issued, he goes over the whole rigorously, making any change, correction, abbreviation, or addition, that seems best.

As an instance of his capacity to labor, it may be mentioned that he spent the greater part of fifteen years in collecting the materials for his "Origin of Species," weighing every fact, pondering over each deduction as deliberately as if he had eternity before him. He believes that work not performed in the very best manner of which its author is capable might as well not be done at all. Conscientiousness characterizes him in everything to the last degree.

Like most scientists he is very calm and equable of disposition. Maybe that going so near to nature yields them something of nature's poise and process. If the ferocious, narrow-minded sectarians and evangelical screamers knew how little their calling of such names as "infidel," "pantheist," "atheist," moved Charles Darwin from the even tenor of his way—how absolutely indifferent, indeed, he is to it—they would certainly save their breath and ink. Of course, he does not hear one hundredth part of what is designed to be the crushing denunciations of "Darwin the atheist." In fact, and infinitesimally small portion of the abuse so gratuitously heaped upon him ever reaches his consciousness, indirectly. Some of his assailers must be aware of this; for he receives by every mail newspapers, printed sermons, and lectures, either exposing his fallacies or berating his infidelity. These never reach his eye. They are opened by his private secretary, and are consigned to the waste-basket. Alas, that so much logic (?) eloquence, and indignation should be thrown away!

What does Darwin believe concerning a future state? What kind of a world does he think the next world to be? Such questions are perpetually put. They are too idle for his answering. If he did answer them, he would frankly admit he had no opinion on a matter so incapable of determination, and that that is of no special consequence, since there are so many other things to resolve before hand.

THE BUFFALO GNATS.

The African tseste and the insect that is slaying horses and mules by the hundreds, in Arkansas, West Tennessee, and Mississippi, may be similar, but it is evident that they do not entirely agree in their selections from the bills of fare that Nature presents to them as they fly. The tseste does not attack wild animals; the gnats attack every wild animal they can reach, and especially deer. The ravages among the latter are well known to the people of the Arkansas side of the river.

These gnats of the Southwest are very small—perhaps about one-half the size of the universal horse fly. They come in the air in countless numbers; the air is full of them when they appear at all, and their appearance is always sudden and overwhelming. They forthwith settle upon every horse, cow, mule or four-footed animal in sight; and in this respect they resemble the tseste, domesticated animals being alike the victims of the two continental pests. They literally cover an animal, owing to their immense numbers, and the animal that is so attacked, say at night, will be dead in the morning, and swelled to an enormous size.

Their bite is very poisonous, causing the wound to fester almost as soon as made. They attack, as we have stated, wild and tame animals indifferently, but, singularly, they have no appetite whatever for human blood. Their home is in the swamps and lowlands, but this season they have swarmed out of their ancient malarial strongholds, and spread themselves over the hills and elevated plateaus. The Eufaula Times claims that they have appeared within seven miles of that city, in one of the Cowikee bottoms. If this be true, we may get a call from the poisonous "varmints" in this State.

If any one encounters a myriad of small jet-black flies, each of them having a hump back or shoulders, like the buffalo, then he may know that the genuine buffalo-gnat has arrived. But a fly without a hump will not be accepted as the deadly insect from the Mississippi bottoms. If it should appear, let the ears, flanks, and other exposed parts of exposed animals be well coated with tar or grease, and if that cannot be done, let fires be started in the stock lots. The insects do not relish tar, grease, or smoke.—Atlanta (Ga.) Constitution.

THE SILK SMUGGLER'S CASE.

A curious question has arisen in the case of Charles L. Lawrence, the notorious silk smuggler who was given up to the United States on a requisition, under the extradition treaty between our government and Great Britain. He is indicted for two offenses, namely, for defrauding the government out of $1,000,000, and for forgery in connection with the custom house entries. The treaty makes no provision for the extradition of persons charged with frauds on the revenue of the United States, and the requisition was not based on that charge, but on that of forgery. Counsel for Lawrence now claim that he can not be lawfully tried on the indictment for defrauding the government, but is entitled to be treated, so far as that charge is concerned, as if he had not been delivered up. E. W. Stoughton, one of his lawyers, went to Washington a few days ago to ask an order from Attorney General Pierrepont directing the district attorney at New York not to try him on the indictment for fraud on the revenue, but the Attorney General, having been one of counsel for Lawrence previous to his appointment to the cabinet office, declined to consider the application, but referred it to the Solicitor General. The decision of the latter has not yet been made public. It is said Judge Pierrepont, just before his appointment as Attorney General, gave an opinion that Lawrence could be tried only on the charge upon which he was delivered by Great Britain. This report, however, wants authentication. The late Justice Nelson held the contrary in re Caldwell. In that case a plea was interposed that the indictment on which the trial was about to proceed did not charge the same crime mentioned in the extradition warrant, and the court held the plea bad.

It appears Lawrence's counsel rely very confidently on an English statute passed in 1870, which declares that "no criminal shall be surrendered on the demand of any state which does not "by law or arrangement" provide that he be tried only on the charge on which he was surrendered. But the extradition treaty between our government was in force long before this law was enacted, and it is not plain how such a material modification could be made by one of the high contracting parties, without the consent of the other. Besides, our courts have nothing to do with administering the laws of England. The law in question could in no event apply to the proceedings of the state to which the surrender was made. The United States has made no such provision as required by the English statute, either "by law or arrangement;" and if England surrendered Lawrence up to us, in violation of her own law, what is that to us? The United States have him in custody, and that without any agreement as to what crimes they will try him for; and we perceive no valid reason why they may not try him for all the crimes he has committed.

FURTHER ULCERATION IN THE MINES.

The dispatches tell of further trouble in the mining regions of Pennsylvania. Indeed, it appears the strike has broken out with renewed violence, and the militia are again required to quell the mobs. The disturbances in the anthracite districts are the most difficult to suppress, the population of operatives being more compact and the rioters consequently able to support each other with greater celerity and efficiency than in the bituminous districts.

This matter of organized mobs fixing the price of labor, not for themselves alone but for all others, and enforcing the rates they have determined on by violence, is become so common, and is affecting interests of such magnitude as to make it really one of the foremost subjects of the times in importance. No doubt the laborers are sometimes aggrieved with wages below what they ought in equity to receive. But oftener their demands are unreasonable, and such that to yield to them would be to destroy the entire business. While they are required, for instance, to submit to a reduction of 10 per cent. below anti-panic wages, the operators who have vast capital employed suffer a loss of from 20 to 50 per cent. It would seem but right that all parties yield somewhat, in order to accommodate the business to the general depression of the times.

But no one can reasonably deny to these laborers the right to fix a price on their own services, and to refuse to work for less. It is of the essence of free labor that both employer and employe should have the option of declining any engagement. If the coal miners do not like to work for the wages offered, they have the indisputable right to refuse, and no one dare attempt to compel them. This right, however, is the prerogative of every individual, and no person or organization has any right, moral or legal, to say that another shall not work for whatever wages he pleases to work for. The interference by these trades unions with the exercise of the right by every individual who is not a member to work for as little wages as he chooses, is a thing that ought not to be tolerated; and the governor of Pennsylvania will have the approval and support of right-thinking people in using whatever force is necessary to quell the strikers' mobs. This thing has gone to such lengths that it appears not at all improbable the mobs may have to be severely dealt with; and it would be no misfortune to the community at large if an example were made of some of them.

A REALLY FINE PERFORMANCE.

We appreciate a really good thing even though it be good at our expense. Nor does it matter what may be the character of the author; if the production has real merit in it, so it can stand alone, we enjoy it. Such a performance is "Kaiser Paul's" letter, dated at Washington, May 21, and published in yesterday's Bulletin. It has genuine humor in it, and we are not going to deny that fact because its humor happens to be aimed at our devoted head. True its reputed author is a person who, in 1860, sold his vote in the Legislature of Oregon for $800, and on the fact being discovered, retired to the obscurity of a hut in the Waldo Hills in Marion county, where, shortly afterwards, he escaped punishment for hog-stealing, through the insanity dodge; but the letter has real music in it, which rings out clear and strong above the discordant undertone of "hog-thief," "hog-thief," "hog-thief," of which it is impossible for the Oregon reader to lose the sound when reading anything written by this Paul. We should like to transfer the entire letter to these columns, but lack of space forbids, and we must be content with recommending it to the attention of our fun-loving readers.

THE MISSISSIPPI RIVER IMPROVEMENTS.

On May 17th Capt. Eads and the rest of the party engaged in the improvements at the mouth of the Mississippi, returned to New Orleans, after a thorough examination of the passes. Capt. Eads reports the condition of affairs much better for the work of constructing the jetties than he had anticipated. He is going at the work with as much force as its nature will admit of, and has no doubt that within a twelve month he will have twenty feet of water in the pass. It is the opinion of the Government engineers, who adopted the plan of Capt. Eads, after a careful survey of the pass, that the construction of the jetties now determined on will be all the improvement the entrance will require for many years, as the current thus confined within narrow limits will carry all the sand and other sediment far out in the Gulf, instead of allowing it to settle on the bar.

The public charities of New York city are immense. The report of the commissioners for the first quarter of the present year, shows the expenditure during the quarter of $368,818 39. At this rate the amount required for the public charities for the year would reach nearly a million and a half. The number of persons admitted to the public hospitals during the quarter was 12,641. And it is estimated that private charities cost nearly as much as public. So that directly and indirectly the people of that city pay $3,000,000 per annum for charities. That is equal to a little more than three dollars to every man, woman and child of the population.

The dispatches say there is a very thorough search making for that package of coin that was stolen from the Treasurer's rooms yesterday, but we cannot see that the details show that the search is at all thorough. It is stated that "the clerks have all been searched by the officers making the investigation." Now let "the officers making the investigation" be all searched by the clerks.

The shortness of the supply of anthracite coal, consequent upon the prolonged suspension of operations, has caused an advance of ten cents a ton on the mining of bituminous coals.

WHEN DID IT HAPPEN?—A correspondent writing from Milwaukie, says: "The week... Inter-Ocean of May 20, in copying the accoun... of the recent explosion of the Senator, say... 'The Senator was a small boat plying betwe... Portland and Oregon City, 25 miles distant, ... the Columbia river.' We were not aware th... any change of location had taken place. W... always supposed that Oregon City was situat... on the Wallamet river, some twelve ... thirteen miles above Portland. Our surpri... can well be imagined when we learn... that Oregon City was on the Columbia rive... When and how that change took place, w... are unable to state. We do not remember ... any earthquakes of sufficient force happenin... here to effect the change. There are som... errors which we can overlook; but when ou... towns are made to wander about like a lot ... gipsies, it makes us believe in the compulsor... school-law system. As this is the secon... time that Oregon City has moved, we think ... should be picketed out and not left to roa... about to the inconvenience of many person... who find it necessary to go there occasionally...

BREAKDOWN AND RUNAWAY.—Yesterda... afternoon Mr. D. H. Hendee, formerly of th... city but now of Milwaukie, had a narrow e... cape from serious and perhaps fatal injurie... Beyond a good fright and severe shock fro... the fall, Mr. and Mrs. Hendee escaped injury...

NEW HOTEL REGISTER.—We were show... yesterday an improvement on the ordina... advertising hotel registers in use at the v... rious hotels in this city, invented by Mr. J. ... Mercer. "It is a decided improvement, and ... the proprietors of our leading hotels hav... agreed to adopt it, in our opinion, Mr. Merc... will not have much trouble in securing th... required number of ads. CORRECTION DESIRED.—Mr. Thomas Smit... proprietor of the Chemeketa Hotel, at Sale... telegraphs us that the statement made to th... effect that the girl who is supposed to ha... been drugged, rode in the coach belonging ... his hotel out to the railroad station, is inco... rect. WHEN DID IT HAPPEN?—A correspondent writing from Milwaukie says "The weekly Bee-Bee of May 20, in copying the account of the recent explosion of the Senator says 'The Senator was a small boat plying between Portland and Oregon City, 25 miles distant on the Columbia river.' We were not aware that any change of location had taken place. We always supposed that Oregon City was situated on the Wallamet river some twelve or fifteen miles above Portland. Our surprise can well be imagined when we learned that Oregon City was on the Columbia river and how that change took place we are unable to state. We do not remember of any earthquakes of sufficient force happening to effect the change. There are some errors which we can overlook, but when our errors are made to wander about like a loose, it makes us believe in the compulsory school law system. As this is the second time that Oregon City has moved we think it should be picketed out and not left to roam about to the inconvenience of many persons who find it necessary to go there occasionally."

BREAKDOWN AND RUNAWAY.—Yesterday afternoon Mr. D. H Hendee formerly of this city but now of Milwaukie, had a narrow escape from serious and perhaps fatal injuries. He was driving in a one-horse buggy up Third street and when in the vicinity of the post-office one of the wheels of the vehicle ran into a rut and broke the axle short off. Both Mr and Mrs. Hendee were thrown out. The horse became frightened and began to run and although Mr Hendee held on firmly to the line the animal got away from him. After running some distance the horse was caught but not until the buggy was pretty badly damaged. Beyond a good fright and severe shock from the fall, Mr and Mrs Hendee escaped injury.

ON THE WAY EAST.—A San Francisco exchange says "Rev J B A Brouillet, V G , especially has been sojourning some time in this city. He is on his way to Washington with the intention of aiding the Catholic commissioner, Gen Ewing, in the management of the office or bureau for the protection of the Catholic Indian interests. During his stay here he has been exerting himself for the support of the Catholic bureau, with the dioceses of the Pacific Coast, and he intends while at the East, to continue the same with all the dioceses of the East. We learn that so far he has met with much kindness and encouragement, and that he feels confident of ultimate success."

NEW HOTEL REGISTER.—We were shown yesterday an improvement on the ordinary printing hotel registers in use at the various hotels in this city, invented by Mr J K Mercer. It is a decided improvement and as the proprietors of our leading hotels have agreed to adopt it, in our opinion, Mr Mercer will not have much trouble in securing the required number of sales. The new register, with an improved blotter will be presented to each hotel. We learn that Mr Mercer has applied for a copyright of the improvement.

[illegible].—Mr Charles Dexter whose pleasant and portly form is so familiar to the frequenters of the seaside at Clatsop Beach, arrived from San Francisco on the last steamer, where he had been sojourning for several months. Mr Dexter has leased the Seaside House for a term of five years, and will take charge of the same on the 10th inst. A more popular and accommodating name it would be difficult to find than Charley.

CORRECTION DESIRED.—Mr Thomas Smith proprietor of the Chemeketa Hotel at Salem, telegraphs us that the statement made to the effect that the girl who is supposed to have been drugged, rode in the coach belonging to the hotel out to the railroad station, is incorrect. He alleges that the young woman in question did not stop at his hotel and did not ride in the coach. In justice to Mr Smith we cheerfully make this statement.

REAL ESTATE SALE.—Some desirable real estate was sold yesterday at the court house at sheriff's sale in satisfaction of a judgment. Lots three and four in block twenty five were sold to E. S. Kearney, Marshal of Washington Territory, for $3,460, and lot two and north half of lot three in block 182 was sold to E. D. Shattuck for $2,950. Mr John Oder also purchased a lot for $400.

OFFICIAL VISIT.—Yesterday morning James Lotan, U.S. inspector of boilers and Captain George H. Flanders inspector of hulls started overland for Coos Bay on an official visit. On their return these gentlemen will make a thorough examination of the condition of the machinery, boilers and hulls of all the steamers that ply on and about those waters.

SOLD OUT.—The evening cotemporary states that the lumbering mills at Knappton, opposite Astoria, have been purchased by a company of New York capitalists and an experienced business man, Mr J P Dickinson, has just arrived from New York city to superintend the running of the mills hereafter.

OFFICERS ELECTED.—At a meeting of the British Benevolent Society held on Wednesday evening, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President Edwin Russell, Vice President James Laidlaw, Treasurer George Good; Secretary Geo A Webb

ERRATA.—In our report of the council proceedings yesterday, in "bills allowed" instead of J.H Lappeus $160 read $60 for board of city prisoners and instead of Chief Lappeus $10 board of city prisoners read "Chas Lawrence $10 for killing dogs.

WILL CLOSE.—We are requested to state that the several job offices in the city will be closed to-morrow on account of the Printers picnic. Persons who have any work to do in that line should have it done to-day as all the printers will take a holiday to-morrow.

STILL FALLING.—A telegram from up the Columbia river states that the water has fallen 4 inches at Wallula between Wednesday morning and yesterday at noon. The weather was quite cool, and indications were favorable for the river to continue to fall.

NEXT TUESDAY EVENING.—There will be a social entertainment next Tuesday evening, given by the Sunday school of the Unitarian church, in their chapel. The object is to raise funds to add to the Sunday school library.

STATE CENTRAL COMMITTEE.—The Democratic State central committee has been called to meet in this city on the 24th of June.

PREPARATION FOR REV. E. P. HAMMOND.

Several clergymen met at the pastor's study of the Baptist Church yesterday at one P M in conference concerning Rev E P Hammond's visit to Portland. Several committees were appointed to make all necessary arrangements for music, places of meeting, reports etc etc. A long private letter from Rev Mr Hammond to the pastor of the Baptist Church discloses several items of interest to the public. In answer to the telegram several days since sent by W S Ladd Wm Williams Gen O O Howard and Rev D J Pierce asking him to come but requiring his terms he says "I am not in the habit of making conditions. My only conditions are that Christians pray for the Holy Spirit and work earnestly and do all they can to get sinners out to the meetings." He wishes all to come and pass their judgment at first for he says "Many say they will not come at first but mean to drop in after a few days. Thus they have often misunderstood the meetings, whereas, if they had come at first and continued they would have understood them." He expects to arrive here to hold a meeting on Saturday, June 12th especially for Christians, though, of course, none would be intruding. We hope that those feeling uncertain of Mr Hammond's methods will at least examine thoroughly before they condemn.

Favored with a pleasant day to-morrow the members of the craft preservative in this city propose to give their first picnic. Harney's Grove about two miles above Vancouver near the Columbia has been selected as the spot at which the picnic is to be given. This grove is situated about half a mile from the bank of the river on rising ground. It is favorable in all its regards dryness and comfort and cannot fail to give satisfaction. The distance to be traveled from where the boat will land up to the grounds being amply compensated by the character of the grove. More desirable grounds could not have been selected for holding a picnic than Harney's Grove—an opinion in which all will heartily concur who may be so fortunate as to attend the Printers Picnic. There will be no lack of enjoyments for the occasion as the several committees have been industrious [illegible] in making the necessary arrangements for the forthcoming affair. Nothing has been omitted which can in the remotest degree contribute to the personal comfort and pleasure of the excursionists. The splendid steamer Fannie Stewart and the commodious barge [illegible], have been chartered expressly for the occasion—the latter craft specially for the accommodation of dancers. Capital music will be provided by the members of the Northwestern band who have been engaged to accompany the excursion. Punctually at 9 o'clock the steamer will leave the O S N Co's wharf for the grounds. Dancing will commence as soon as the boat starts and be kept up spiritedly until the landing is reached. On the way over the boat will touch at Vancouver and take on board all who desire to attend from that place. Immediately on landing and prior to marching to the grounds a four-oared boat race will come off between rival crews taken from the printers employed at the OREGONIAN and Bulletin offices. Soon after reaching the grounds the regular sports of the day will commence consisting of base ball match, spelling contest, foot race, wheelbarrow race, sack race, croquet, ladies target shooting, leaping and other exciting out door sports. Substantial prizes have been secured by the committee, and will be awarded the successful competitors in each of the above mentioned sports. Refreshments have been provided in abundance on the grounds and those who do not carry along their lunch will have no occasion to want for anything in the edible line. Late in the afternoon the excursionists will start back to the city arriving here after 8 o'clock. Fire works have been provided and will be displayed as the steamer passes the city front. To one and all a cordial invitation is extended. No such word as fail is known in the printers' vocabulary, and the members of the "craft" in Portland propose to make the forthcoming picnic one of the huge affairs of the season.

MRS LINCOLN'S INSANITY

WHY HER RELATIVES WERE DRIVEN TO THE PAINFUL COURSE OF BRINGING HER INTO COURT—ROBERT LINCOLN'S TESTIMONY

New York Tribune of May [illegible]

Since the death of President Lincoln his widow, it is said has continued to decline not only in vigor of mind but in physical condition nothing seeming to avail her in her condition [illegible] So feeble had become the state of her mind and as a consequence [illegible] and habits of life that on Saturday last a council of the leading physicians of Chicago and Mrs. Lincoln's personal friends was held to consider what was best to be done for her. The result of the council was an agreement to [illegible] an order to try the question of her sanity. On Wednesday Mrs Lincoln was brought into court and the ad trial which resulted in a verdict declaring her to be insane was begun. When the patient in the lady entered the court room she was pallid [illegible] very and excited and her general appearance was that of one who was suffering from nervous excitement. Accompanying her was her son whose every feature was marked with sadness. His eyes too were filled with tears as were also those of several others. Mrs Lincoln took a seat facing the Jury and by her side as the counsel [illegible] the biographer of her husband the Hon I N Arnold. The petitioner [illegible] Robert Lincoln took a seat [illegible] to her left. Beside him sat the Hon Leonard Swett and B F Ayer counsel for the petitioner. The witnesses testified to Mrs Lincoln's strange [illegible] her expensive and reckless purchases of jewelry and other articles of which she had no need and gave evidence of having observed indications of mental disturbance on many occasions.

TESTIMONY OF MRS. LINCOLN'S SON

When Robert Lincoln took the stand his face indicated the unpleasantness of the duty he was about to perform and his eyes were expressive of the grief he felt. Mrs Lincoln at first looked on calmly but during the recital of the incidents of the family history and reference to the death of his father and brother she gave way to tears and turned her face in her hands. A summary of his testimony is given below.

The witness he had taken was to conform [illegible] he had done it in the interest of his mother. He met her in the car upon her arrival from the South, and upon meeting her she was startled. She had the appearance of good health and did not even seem fatigued by the trip. He asked her to come to his house but she declined and went to the hotel. He went with her and took supper. She told him that at the first breakfast she took after leaving Jacksonville an attempt was made to poison her. He occupied a room adjoining hers that night. She slept well that night but subsequently was restless and would come to his door in her night-dress and rap. About April [illegible] she ceased rapping at his door he having told her that if she persisted he would leave the hotel. He went to her room April [illegible] and found her but slightly dressed. She left the room in that condition and under some pretext. The next he knew of her she was going down in the elevator to the office. He had the elevator stopped and tried to induce her to return to her room. She regarded his interference as impertinent and declined to leave the elevator but he put his arms about her and gently forced her. She screamed "You are going to murder me." She had sent the fire kept her trunk and property in the Fidelity Safe Deposit Company's building. He called on her the last week in April and she told him that all Chicago was going to be burned and that she was going to send her trunks to some country town. She said Milwaukee was too near Oshkosh where there had been a terrible fire the night before. She told him that his house would be the only one saved and he suggested to her to leave her trunks with him. The following Sunday she showed him securities for $57,000 which she carried in her pocket. She had spent large sums of money recently. She had bought $600 worth of lace curtains three watches costing $450 $700 worth of other jewelry $200 worth of soaps and perfumeries and a whole piece of silk. He had no doubt doubt she was insane. He had had a conference with her cousin, and Major Stuart of Springfield and Judge Davis of the supreme court, all of whom advised him to the course he had taken. He did not regard it safe to allow her remain longer unrestrained. She had been of unsound mind since the death of her husband and had been irresponsible for the last ten years. He regarded her as eccentric and unmanageable. There was no cause for her recent purchases as her trunks were filled with dresses she never wore. She never wore jewelry.

The verdict of the jury adjudging Mrs Lincoln to be insane declared that the disease is of unknown duration and is not with her hereditary, that she is not subject to suicidal tendencies. The verdict was received by Mrs Lincoln without any visible emotion. She was stolid and unmoved and did not allow its reading to interrupt the conversation in which she was engaged with Mr Arnold.

Abner Robinson, of Newburyport, has pointed to a gun over his fireplace for several years and said each time "That's the weapon my [illegible] carried at Lexington." The other day, at the celebration, the Mayor of the town went to investigate matters, and after a while, found that the gun was breech loader of the present day, and that Abner's dad had died of black measles in State Prison and then Abner crawled under the barn and wouldn't come out till next morning.

The capital stock of the Salem Storage and Shipping Company has been increased from $7,000 to $18,000. The directors have been instructed to go on with the work of constructing the wharf according to plans and specifications submitted. This wharf will add great importance to the company's operations and [illegible] steamboat landing. Its cost will be [illegible] of $7,000

Senator McMillan has been charged with an attack of brother [illegible] in connection with the St Paul postoffice. At last accounts he was slowly recovering and denying that he had been sick at all. The trouble seems that McMillan is too good a man for the purposes of the Bill King newspapers.—Chicago Tribune

SPRING FLOWERS

[illegible] dainty baby sisters
That hide in silent nooks
That linger by the cow path
And peep into the brooks
To me you are the warders
Of the realm of Long Ago
At whose [illegible] beck innumerable [illegible]
Like shadows come and go

By mossy rocks and nodding fern
You lift your timid eyes
And by the wounded maple trees
In smiling groups arise
No more the shrieking, white [illegible]
Affright the naked woods
But all the scented aisles are gay
With Flora's dimpled broods.

[illegible] years have passed since first from
You [illegible] the [illegible] bright
And many a [illegible] dream
Has faded into night
Still do I hail with boyish love
The violet's sweet perfume—
Still joy to see the crocus [illegible]
Like Lazarus from the tomb

I thrill to see the birds again
Upon the apple tree
Where every [illegible] [illegible]
Of glossy tassel to be
Where soon the winged Argonaut
From far lands beyond the [illegible]
Will sing their merry love songs
And build their homes again

I trace the tints of deathless Hope
Sweet flowers in all your beauty
You come as [illegible] interpreters
Of man's exalted duty
You whisper of a dawning heaven
Beneath us as above
When earth shall melt with poetry
And man be full of love

STORY OF A LIGHTNING-ROD PEDDLER

THE CONQUEST OF MRS GILKENS—VENI VIDI VICI

He drove his team close up to the fence, got down and wrapped on the door. The widow Gilkens opened it and he said: "Mrs. Gilkens, I am cognizant of the circumstances by which you are at present surrounded, left, as you are, to trudge down the journey of life through a cold and heartless world—no longer sustained and encouraged by the noble one to whom you gave the treasures of your heart's affection and bowed down by the manifold cares and responsibilities incidental to the rearing of eight small children on forty acres of sub carboniferous limestone land, yet, Mrs Gilkens you are aware that the season is now approaching when dark, dismal, dangerous clouds at frequent intervals span the canopy of heaven, and when zig zag streaks of electricity dart promiscuously hither and thither rendering this habitation unsafe for yourself and those dear little ones, hence therefore, let me sell you a copper wire, silver tipped and highly magnetic lightning rod."

The woman staggered back a few paces and yelled: "Narcis unfasten old Crouch!" In another instant a savage bulldog came darting around the corner of the house with bristles up, thirsting for gore. The dog had already mangled a machine agent and a patent soap man, and was held in great esteem by the better class of citizens for his courage and service, but when his eye met the hard, penetrating gaze of Mr Parsons, his chops fell, and he slunk off, and hid in the currant bushes. Then the man said: "My dear lady, you seem to be a little excited. Now, if you will allow me to explain the probable inestimable—"

"Dern ye, I know something that will start ye," said Mrs Gilkens, as she reached under some bed clothing and brought forth a horse pistol, but owing to the shattered condition of her nerves, her aim was unsteady, and the charge of buckshot missed, save where a few scattered ones struck his cheek and bounced off. A hard, metallic smile spread over his countenance as he leaned his shoulder against the door frame and again commenced: "My dear madame, such spasmodic manifestations of your disinclination to make a judicious investment of a few paltry dollars—"

"Hi—co!" shrieked the widow, and collapsed into a kind of jerking swoon, and before she had recovered a highly magnetic lightning rod decorated her humble domicile, and Parsons had the blank note filled out all ready for her signature.—Madison (Ind.) Courier.

THE LATE DISTURBANCE IN HAYTI

Advices from Kingston, Jamaica, bring the following details of the late disturbance in Hayti.

Saturday, May 1st, was celebrated as the Annual Agricultural Festival throughout Hayti. On the evening previous, President Domingue was secretly advised of a conspiracy to assassinate him on the following day, with a view to establishing Monplaisir Pierre in the Presidency, supported by General Bryce and General Canal, while the President was in church. Three separate bodies of troops were sent to arrest the conspirators.

General Bryce residing immediately opposite the British Consulate was the first to be surrounded. He refused to surrender, and, with his revolver brought down four Haytian officers before he was fired upon and mortally wounded. He crept into the British Consulate, where he died. A shot intended for General Bryce killed a servant of the British Consul. A Jamaica negro servant of General Bryce was also killed in the affray. When the troops reached the residence of Monplaisir Pierre who was a candidate for the presidency when General Nessage's term expired he, too, resisted and fought within his house until wounded, and retiring to the attic, shot himself through the head.

When General Canal was met he was in the vicinity of the American Minister's residence, at the head of a body of soldiers. These on seeing the Government forces, forsook General Canal and fled, the General creeping into Mr Bassett's residence under the stars and stripes, where he now remains. The scene which followed these incidents are indescribable. The President, who is a man of overwhelming passion, directed the arrest of every person suspected of being implicated, and arrests are now being made throughout the entire Republic, creating a great sensation. No one feels secure and a general panic prevails.

The city of Port au Prince has been placed under martial law and several palaces and stores have been pillaged and burned. No vessels are allowed to land cargo and no merchandise is permitted to be shipped. Several English residents succeeded in escaping in the midst of the disturbance on the British steamer San Jacinto leaving for Jamaica. Intelligence via Jacmel, three days later, says order was restored on the 2d of May. A vessel has been dispatched from Port Royal to protect foreign subjects.

ECONOMICAL YOUNG WOMEN.—Thirty one young ladies in Warsaw, Ky have signed a new kind of pledge which reads: "We the undersigned ladies of Warsaw desiring by our example to promote economy and to discountenance extravagance, and thereby lighten, in some measure, the burdens of our husbands and fathers by prudent retrenchment in our household expenses therefore, pledge our word of honor each to the other. That we will not during a period of one year from the first of May 1875, purchase any material for wearing apparel the cost of which shall exceed twenty five cents per yard, And shall further promise to observe a strict economy in all our household matters, and cheerfully add by those delicate sacrifices to the general stock of home comforts—too often dispensed with for the frivolous outside adornment of the body alone."

Sarah Thomas daughter of a clergyman of Woodhull, Steuben county N Y, ran away with John Farris, a married man of Ithica who robbed her of her watch chain and some money. She left him had him arrested, and he was to have gone to prison for six months. Her disgrace preyed upon her so that she ended her life by throwing herself in front of a freight car.

Coin Bars [illegible]

From January to June 1st the [illegible] shipment of treasure from this port by Wells Fargo & Co's express, embraced [illegible] in [illegible] and [illegible] in currency and gold notes [illegible]

This, of course [illegible] by any means all the treasure sent from our State, but it is mentioned [illegible] it exceeds the amount sent away by them during the first five months of last [illegible] California, during the same time [illegible] sent East over $31,000,000 and Oregon's proportion would be over $[illegible] and it is safe to say there has been sent out of this State [illegible] the shipment of produce since the year began [illegible] 000.

The present dull condition of trade may be in a large measure attributed to the heavy export of treasure from New York, amounting to over [illegible] 000,000 in the first four and one half months of the year. From the present condition of the European money markets it would seem that a change must soon come. There is no scarcity of loanable funds in England, France or Germany. The Bank of England held £[illegible] at the opening of the month, and France and Germany were still better off. It is not a [illegible] something unusual that the Bank of England had recently to apply to the Stock Exchange to take some of its money. Other banks in England are in the same fix—all of them finding it very difficult to place their funds at satisfactory rates. The dull condition of trade in Great Britain probably contributes to this monetary depression. The low prices for produce and their weight since less money is required to perform the same volume of business. The approaching harvest period will doubtless effect some changes in the financial situation both here and in Europe. Until then, we may look for a quiet market all round.

English Wheat Market

Beerbohm's London cablegram of May 20th says:

"Unless any untoward change shall take place we shall hope for as good crops in the British Isles as in most other countries of Europe, and the probability of a lower range of prices in the ensuing season ought, therefore to be kept in view. English and French country markets on the 13th May 1875 were lower. Weather in the United Kingdom favorable for the crops."

The supply of wheat and flour in the United Kingdom during the four weeks ended May 1 1875 was 260,966 qrs more than the consumption. The consumption during the eight weeks from March 1st to May 1st is placed at [illegible] qrs [illegible] qrs supply from home deliveries and imports, indicating an approximate surplus in eight weeks of 188,[illegible] qrs which is equal to [illegible] bushels or 131,[illegible] bushels weekly average surplus.

Beerbohm's London cable of May 18 [illegible] report the farmers deliveries of home grown wheat in the [illegible] towns at 60,000 to 65,000 qrs and estimated in the Kingdom at [illegible] to [illegible] qrs. The imports of foreign for the week were 60,000 to 65,000 bbls of flour and 215,000 to 220,000 qrs of wheat and 80,000 to 90,000 qrs of maize. The supply of wheat and flour for the week including home grown and foreign was equal to 49[illegible] to 521,2[illegible] qrs against 400,000 minimum and 420,000 quarters maximum weekly consumption giving a surplus of wheat over consumption for the week of [illegible] to [illegible] quarters.

Home Produce Market.

WHEAT—There is no change in this cereal in the market since our last weekly review. A few small lots have been offered in the market but buyers seem to be about as indifferent as sellers and the difference between holders terms and sellers offers is as wide as ever. Quotations are almost nominal at $1 50@1 55 per cental in the local market.

FLOUR—In this commodity there are but few new developments to note. As will be seen by our export lists the shipments both to San Francisco and to ports to the north continue to be quite large for the season. We see no reason to change our quotations of one week ago $5 per bbl for standard extras, $4 25@4 50 for outside brands and $4 for superfine. The local trade is quite active.

OATS—The surplus does not seem to be quite exhausted yet and a few small lots continue to reach the market. Prices, however are rather weaker and some lower quotations to day are [illegible] cents per bushel in sacks.

BARLEY—There is but little inquiry at present and only a small amount is changing hands. Quotations are unchanged.

MILL FEED—There is still but little beyond the requirements of the home market, though a few lots have been shipped to Victoria and other northern ports. We quote bran at $[illegible] ton, shorts, $22[illegible] chopped middlings, etc $[illegible] 30 oil cake meal $30 with but little in market.

HAY—A full supply is in the market quotable $10@11 ton for fair to best timothy loose and [illegible] baled.

POTATOES—Receipts have fallen off and but few of the old crop are left. Good lots would sell at $1 50 ℔ bushel.

ONIONS—There are but few lots in the market quotable 2 cents ℔ ℔ nominally.

APPLES DRIED—There is a fair demand for fair lots either in sacks or kegs the latter preferred at [illegible] cents ℔ ℔. Exports are increasing.

APPLES RIPE—A small lot occasionally reaches the market but none of good quality, [illegible] $1 [illegible] ℔ box.

BACON—There has been a large amount received during the past week and the market is almost overstocked. Quotations are lower at [illegible] ℔ for shoulders [illegible] for ham and [illegible] for sides of good country cured. Sugar cured quotable 2@[illegible] higher.

LARD—Good Oregon made is worth 16c ℔ ℔ in kegs or tins but no sign of an advance.

BUTTER—It is difficult to quote good table butter always sells readily in this market while poor stuff is a drug the year round. Common roll is worth now [illegible] ℔ ℔.

CHEESE—Quotable from State dairies at [illegible] ℔ ℔.

EGGS—The quotations to day are 16c ℔ dozen, with no discount, but reported weak.

CHICKENS—There are plenty in the market but not very choice. We still quote at $1 for good full grown and $2 [illegible] dozen for spring.

BEEF CATTLE—Live cattle in fair condition are quotable at [illegible] ℔ ℔ on foot or dressed at [illegible]

HIDES AND FURS—There is a good trade being carried on by local buyers and shippers. Beef hides are quotable for choice dry [illegible] ℔ ℔ green salted 7c green 6c calfs 10 [illegible] elk 18@20c ℔ ℔ deer [illegible] in the dried and [illegible] in the red green mink skins each $1 [illegible] otter $[illegible] beaver [illegible]

WOOL—The season is only just opening the first shipments being made during the week. The John L Stephens takes about 11,000 lbs this evening. Prices are not very satisfactory, 23c being about the best figure named for valley wools and [illegible] cents for Eastern Oregon. Fine combing of course would bring more—say 25@26c—but it must be extra and and most carefully packed.

Shipping Intelligence

The steamship John L Stephens will sail for San Francisco at 1 o'clock to night with mail freight and a short passenger list.

The bark Cara Tual hauled up to the Central dock this forenoon and is filling up with wheat.

The schooner Superior is taking on flour at Flanders wharf to day and will clear for San Francisco the latter part of the week.
